

Factory Fiber Optic Coupler Prices

AI Overview

Fiber optic coupler prices vary widely, typically ranging from $2 to $50 per unit depending on type, mode, and customization. Typical Price Ranges Standard singlemode or multimode couplers (LC, SC, ST) generally cost $2-$10 per unit for bulk factory orders, depending on quality and quantity. High-performance or specialty couplers (E2000, MTP, or custom coupling ratios) can range from $15-$50 per unit, especially when designed for industrial, aerospace, or long-distance applications. Custom or factory-tailored couplers with specific coupling ratios, low insertion loss, or unique fiber configurations may incur additional costs due to R&D and production complexity. Factors Affecting Price Fiber Type: Singlemode couplers for long-distance, high-bandwidth applications are generally more expensive than multimode couplers for short-range networks. Coupling Ratio: Standard 50/50 couplers are cheaper, while specialized ratios (e.g., 90/10) or tap couplers increase cost. Connector Type: LC, SC, ST, MTP, and E2000 connectors differ in manufacturing complexity, affecting price. Quantity and Bulk Orders: Factory-direct purchases often reduce per-unit cost significantly, especially for orders of hundreds or thousands of units. Customization: Custom designs, low-loss ceramic sleeves, or specialized coatings increase unit price. Sourcing Tips Wholesale suppliers like CableWholesale and Mouser provide competitive pricing for bulk orders and standard couplers. Factory-direct manufacturers such as Matrix PT Tech Co., Ltd. offer custom solutions and may provide discounts for large-scale industrial orders. Technical consultation is recommended to ensure the selected coupler meets your network requirements, including fiber mode, wavelength compatibility, and environmental conditions. By considering these factors, you can estimate costs and negotiate effectively with suppliers to obtain high-quality fiber optic couplers at competitive factory prices.
