

Fireproof trough-shaped cable trays

AI Overview

A fireproof trough-type cable tray is a fully enclosed system designed to protect electrical cables from fire, mechanical damage, moisture, and electromagnetic interference while maintaining circuit integrity. Design and Structure Fireproof trough-type cable trays feature a fully enclosed trough design that completely surrounds cables, offering superior protection compared to open ladder trays. The enclosure prevents dust, water vapor, falling debris, chemical corrosion, and rodent damage, ensuring safe and stable cable operation. Many systems include matching accessories such as elbows, tees, reducers, and cover plates to form a continuous, fireproof network. Materials and Fire Resistance These trays are typically made from cold-rolled steel, stainless steel, aluminum alloy, or FRP, often with fire-resistant coatings or electrostatic spraying to enhance flame retardancy and thermal insulation. The materials are selected based on the environment: galvanized steel for general use, stainless steel for corrosive areas, and FRP for chemical plants. The fireproof coating ensures that cables can remain powered for a specified period during a fire, supporting emergency power requirements. Protective Features Mechanical protection: Shields cables from impact and crushing. Moisture and dust prevention: Fully enclosed design prevents ingress of water and dust. Electromagnetic shielding: Reduces interference for sensitive control and communication cables. Corrosion resistance: Suitable for harsh environments, including chemical plants and coastal areas. Applications Fireproof trough-type cable trays are widely used in power plants, data centers, hospitals, tunnels, underground garages, shopping malls, transportation systems, petrochemical facilities, and high-rise buildings. They are suitable for both strong current and weak current circuits, including fire protection and emergency power systems. Installation and Customization Modern trough-type trays are designed for ease of installation, often supporting single-person lift and modular assembly. T...
